

Abstract

Hardening protection compositions based on substances which form boron glass for partial carburization of metallic 5 components, which contain magnesium-silicon compounds as an additive. These hardening protection compositions can be used very advantageously in processes for the partial carburization of metallic components and in particular are outstandingly suitable for vacuum carburization.